The Journey of Progress for Women in Construction and Paving a Path to Success

Hannah Batsche

Construction

Gould & Ratner presents the next installment of our Construction Interview Series. As a continued effort to keep our clients informed of current trends in the construction industry, we will continue to periodically sit down with leaders at influential companies to discuss their insights.

To mark this year's Women in Construction Week, Hannah Batsche, an associate in the firm's Construction Practice, recently interviewed Catherine Tojaga, President of CT Mechanical and the founder of She Builds, to learn more about the progress for women in construction, as well as Catherine's path to success.
