Gould & Ratner has joined the Wall Street Blockchain Alliance (WSBA), becoming one of its latest corporate members as part of the firm's enhancement and expansion of its Cryptocurrency & Blockchain Practice.

"It is a privilege to welcome Gould & Ratner to the family of WSBA corporate members," said Ron Quaranta, WSBA Chairman. "Given their deep legal expertise and business acumen, we look forward to their collaboration and thought leadership as the cryptoasset and blockchain ecosystems evolve to their full potential."

The WSBA is an industry-leading nonprofit trade association whose mission is to advocate, guide and promote comprehensive adoption of blockchain technology and cryptoassets across global markets.

"Gould & Ratner is thrilled to join the WSBA. We are excited for our team to engage with the WSBA's membership on emerging legal, policy, and technology issues in this space," said Robert Chidester, a partner at the firm and leader of the Cryptocurrency & Blockchain Practice.

Gould & Ratner's Cryptocurrency and Blockchain Practice includes experienced corporate attorneys who help sophisticated investors and entrepreneurs take advantage of the significant opportunities presented by the frontier-like world of cryptocurrency and blockchain technology.

For more than 80 years, Gould & Ratner LLP has provided comprehensive legal counsel and business advice to Fortune 500 corporations, closely held businesses, financial institutions, and entrepreneurs, as well as families and their businesses in corporate, litigation, real estate, construction, tax, estate and succession planning, intellectual property, human resources and employment, environmental and related specialty fields.
